

Seniors who are downsizing and vulnerable to isolation benefit from co-living structures because shared spaces, hobbies, and caretakers contribute to increased health and affordability.